

Severn House Publishers, Inc.

595 Madison Avenue, 15th Floor
New York, NY 10022
212-935-0966 (phone/fax)

TITLE: The Price of Liberty

AUTHOR: Keir Graff

PUBLISHER: Severn House

PAGES: 248

PRICE: $28.95

BINDING: hardcover, library binding

ISBN: 978-0-7278-6872-5

PUBLICATION DATE: August 2010

CATEGORY: Thriller

DESCRIPTION: Jack McEnroe is a construction worker with an unusual job: building a prison for terrorists. Like his neighbors in Red Rock, Wyoming, Jack isn't particularly concerned about politics. In a depressed rural economy, he's just grateful to have a job.

Jack's boss, Dave Fetters, is grateful, too: he has a no-bid, cost-plus contract issued by the previous administration. It's his last chance to get rich, and he's making the most of it.

But Dave is cooking the books, passing inflated costs along to defense contractor Halcyon Corporation—and Jack's ex-wife, Kyla, plans to blow the whistle. Suddenly, everyone Jack cares about, including his two young children, is in danger.

As the first winter snows fall in the rugged mountains, Jack must navigate a razor-wire labyrinth to rescue those he loves. And the true price of liberty, he discovers, is paid not in dollars, but human life.

PRAISE: Library Journal called My Fellow Americans (2007) "highly recommended." The Chicago Sun-Times wrote that One Nation, Under God "evokes such paranoid 1970s thrillers as The Parallax View and Six Days of the Condor." James Grady, the author of Six Days of the Condor, calls The Price of Liberty "A heartland story of intrigue that should make Tom Clancy sit up and take notice."

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Keir Graff is the author of three previous novels and numerous short stories. The senior editor of Booklist Online, he lives in Chicago. You can learn more about him at www.keirgraff.com.

